DARVO (or how people try to escape accountability)

Deny the behavior

Attack the individual doing the confronting

Reverse the roles of Victim and Offender

The perpetrator assumes the victim role and turns the true victim (or the whistle blower) into an alleged offender / attacker by trying to undermine their credibility through false accusations.

I'd only had the commentary from friends, and so I wanted better clarity and objectivity by asking complete strangers with no attachment or stake in the matter, to decide who the asshole actually is when it comes to the meltdown of the friendship Randal and I had.

So, I went to the Reddit r/AmITheAsshole forum and asked.

Here are the results:

They ALL seem to agree that I was not the one who actually ended this friendship. He was. They all seem to agree that I SHOULD HAVE been the one to do so, but I didn't. I guess he only wants people around him he can sponge off of and he will always refuse to give proper respect or any courtesy of any kind for those who do everything for him.

Life is about perspective. You might think you're a lion...but to some people, you're a dick.

The funny part about this post is that I didn't even tell them about everything ELSE I did for him lol. If I'd added the advertising editing, the screenshot searches, the digging for industry information for him, etc etc etc. I think they might have been even more against him than they are now.

I'd seriously like to know how he can be so adamant that I was the problem. I guess if you're not the obedient slave of Randal Scott, you are worthless and worthy of being smeared across the circuit.
